

Say it with roller banners

Roller banners are banners that can be rolled up and down. They are used to hold announcements and are used to display them prominently at shopping places, events or at some strategic locations. Roller banners come in different sizes and they are of different types. They are a great portable display solution.

Typically roller banners are delivered by most banner makers within 48 hours from confirmation of design and content. Usually users can make their own designs and save them as files. Roller banners are then designed using the content from these files. They can also be made with the designers who are usually there at the banner makers'. The print quality is so good in these advanced technology days that the banners look like real life pictures that have been blown up. Some roller banners come with their own stands and their own carry bags too. This makes them easy to be carried around and placed where ever needed at a moment's notice. The roller banners are typically protected with anti glare technology and anti scratch technology that makes them long lasting and tough. Assembling roller banner stands is a very simple process – there is normally a graphic panel that can be rolled out and a telescopic pole that can be attached to it to give the roller banners a vertical support.

Another type of roller banners comes with a wide base which is made of aluminium – it is not only attractive but also stable. This type is preferred in busy environments where there is a lot of movement. These roller banners come with a hinged lid for integral storing of poles. Roller banner stands also come with an anodised silver base available in different widths. These roller banners come with a twist and lock graphic pole as part of the stand. There are roller banners that have displays on both sides – so with a single roller banner, businesses can make twice the impact on the public. Some roller banners use the Ratchet Tensioner which helps to keep the display looking great for a very long time without sagging.

The Quick Change roller banners are really useful where changes are often required in the content. There are quick change cassettes that are placed in the roller banner stands. When ever the graphics have to be changed, all the user has to do is to order a replacement for the cassette and change it. There is no need to return the entire banner stand. Not only that, there is no need to waste time either. A library of roller banners graphics can be built too without the need to buy multiple roller banner stands. This also saves a lot of money while giving the flexibility of changing graphics often. For environmentally conscious businesses, bamboo roller banners are an ideal solution. They are made from bamboo and 90% renewable resources as bamboos grow back easily and quickly. These roller banners are a green solution for graphic displays and are also easy to transport, set up and dismantle.
